Sign up for the Latest Updates for sale is the Red, White and Blue w/White Stripe Trilobite Paracord Bracelet w/Adjustable Shackle. Each bracelet is handmade in the U.S.A. to order and includes an adjustable clevis-pin style buckle/shackle. Great gift for the holidays for any family member or friend. Fast and Free shipping included with this item!! Order from Paracordinnovations™ and your order will be made and shipped out by the next business day! Description The Red, White and Blue w/White Stripe Trilobite Paracord Bracelet w/Adjustable Shackle is a brand-new item I have began making for my store. Each bracelet is hand-made to order and contains a minimum of 10 feet of paracord, which can be used in multiple survival situations. The bracelets are extremely sturdy and measure 1 1/4 inches in width. Clevis-pin shackle gives you 1/2 of an inch of adjustment for your wrist.izing The best way to measure for size is to take a string and wrap it around your wrist, marking where the free end meets on the string. Then lay out the string next to a measuring tape or ruler and add 1/4 to 1/2 an inch to the measurement you get. This works best for sizing unless you know the approximate circumference of your wrist. Sizes and length are listed in the drop down menu. If you need a different size or are looking for different color combinations, you can contact me through eBay messages and I can custom make a size for you. Share Tweet Share Share Pin Claim My FREE Firestarter Paracord Bracelet A piece of survival gear might not be part of your everyday wardrobe - but maybe it should be. And it doesn't have to look like gear either. Paracord bracelets are a tidy way of carrying 3.5+ metres of cordage on your person. Plus, near-limitless design and colour combinations mean you can personalize it to your taste. This isn't a friendship bracelet, Mad Max wore one and he survives in an apocalyptic dystopia. Jokes aside, why is paracord good to have on hand? Using military spec #550 cord offers cordage that is flexible and interior braided nylon strands make it very strong. Uses for a paracord bracelet are varied; unravel a bracelet and use cordage to fasten a shelter, build primitive traps, make general repairs, tie yourself to another person, hang a line and so much more. If you need more length (without the strength) stripping the paracord to reveal the interior strands can provide six to eight times more string. Moreover, you can turn a paracord bracelet into a multi-tool by using fasteners that have a whistle and/or ferro rod (a flint spark lighter). Buy paracord HERE. Cobra Cobra Knot Bracelet This tutorial teaches the most basic design of paracord bracelet-making. By combining the most popular and easy to create design, the Cobra, with a lanyard knot, you can create a bracelet with a little hidden colour, but it also does not require you to attach a buckle. View the entire tutorial here. 2. Simple LacedParacord Guild This design takes that standard Cobra design and makes it look infinitely more intricate by weaving in a thinner type one paracord to not only add in extra metres of cord, but to add extra eye-catching detail to your design. View the entire tutorial here. 3. Easy Slip OnParacord Guild By adding a piece of bendable wire, you can create a paracord bracelet in any design in such a way that you do not need to add a buckle or even a lanyard knot to keep it on your wrist. The wire makes the bracelet stiff and bendable to that it is easy to slip on and off the wrist. View the entire tutorial here. 4. LadderParacord GuildLike the Simple Laced bracelet, the Ladder stitch once again adds a dash of colour and intrigue to a design using the thinner type one paracord to create a unique look like it uses more cord than it actually does. View the entire tutorial here. 12. Easy BraidedParacord GuildLike the Twisted bracelet, the Braided bracelet design creates an extremely basic way to store your paracord on your wrist. Using two colours adds a bit more excitement to the bracelet, but it can look just as good using one solid colour. View the entire tutorial here. 13. Cyclone WrapThe Weavers of Eternity Paracord Tutorials The Cyclone Wrap presents an awesome two-toned original design that features an eye-catching division of colour right down the middle and looks as though it is wrapped around another design. However, it is one complete weave that, while easy to do, looks infinitely more complex. View the entire tutorial here. 14. Cat's ClawGet Knotted ParacordUsing two colours fused together, the Cat's Claw is woven together to create an effect that looks like claws in your paracord design. Because of the more complex weaving patterns, this bracelet ends up holding a decent bit of cordage when compared to other beginner level designs. View the entire tutorial here. 15. TARDIS Bar This Dr. Who-themed bracelet uses blue and white to create a unique interlocking design that manages to cram the usual amount of cordage into a compact design. 16. InterlockedParacord 101 Like the TARDIS Bar above, the interlocked design creates a more complex looking bracelet, but oddly enough, actually uses less cord. With a wider wrist feel and a unique two-toned woven design, this is one bracelet that you can be proud of as a beginning weaver. View the entire tutorial here. 17. Cross KnotParacord Guild Similar to the Braided design, the Cross Knot provides another simple paracord bracelet design made up of a simple weaving pattern. Using one solid colour, this design provides a cleaner look than the braided bracelet, but still remains one of the thinner options out there. View the entire tutorial here. 18. One Strand WeaveOne Strand WeaveAs a modification to the Woven Plait design, this bracelet looks similar to the aforementioned Simple Laced design, but it actually created using one long piece of paracord. The snaking design found within is actually a quick-release mechanism to give the wearer fast access to their length of paracord. View the entire tutorial here. 19. 2-Colour HansenParacord GuildThis is another bracelet that uses a dowel rod to create a unique design. By using two different colours of type one paracord, the 2-Colour Hansen bracelet creates a complex looking design similar to the much more difficult Gaucho style of bracelet. View the entire tutorial here. 20. Stitched The Stitched style of bracelet essentially uses a Fishtail design with a center stitch that uses a slightly thinner type of paracord. As the center stitch hides the tell tale center design of a Fishtail, the Stitched bracelet is often confused for a design that it of a much higher calibre. 21. CorkscrewBored ParacordThe Corkscrew design uses two different colours of paracord fused with each other that are then woven together to create a design that actually looks similar to the Katana Wrap. Although round rather than flat like many paracord designs, the corkscrew creates a particularly alluring look. View the entire tutorial here. 22. Shark JawParacord GuildThe Shark Jaw is a popular design among braiders because of how two contrasting colours create a bracelet design that looks like a series of jagged shark teeth. However, despite its popularity, this design remains an easy staple much like the Cobra or Fishtail. View the entire tutorial here. 23. 2-Colour Slash Dash Bar2-Colour Slash Dash BarThe 2-Colour Slash Dash Bar is one of those paracord designs that you are likely to find in pre-made paracord bracelets in stores. However, it is one of the more fun paracord bracelets to weave because of how rewarding the end result is. Using your two favourite colours, this bracelet comes out looking favourable with that coveted slanted look. View this entire tutorial here. 24. Stairstep StichParacord Guild This design takes a page out of the leatherworker's book and adds in a Stairstep Stitch to the usual Cobra style bracelet. Like the previous Stairstep design, this bracelet takes things to the next level by adding another Stairstep on top of a basic Cobra design. 41. 2-Strand LoopBored Paracord By using two long strips of paracord and the Twisted design, you create a bracelet that looks like two bracelets, but is actually just one. Want to make things even harder? Try using two colours. View the entire tutorial here. 42. Heart StitchedParacord GuildWant to literally wear your heart on your sleeve? This design uses a base Cobra weave and uses type one paracord to stitch intricate alternating hearts within it. It is as romantic a gift as one could hope to receive from a paracord weaver, too. View the entire tutorial here. 43. Belly FishtailParacord GuildThe Belly Fishtail is essentially just a Fishtail on top of a Fishtail. However, because this uses a three cord system the difficulty of this weave comes in how tricky it is to set up properly. View the entire tutorial here. 44. Hanging BridgeBored ParacordUnlike other close knit weave designs, the Hanging Bridge creates a more loose knit design between strands that lends to its name, because it looks like a hanging rope bridge right on your wrist. View the entire tutorial here. 45. Building Blocks Using two unique colours, the Building Blocks design looks like building blocks stacked on top of each other. However, upon closer inspection, the big building blocks are actually made out of other smaller building blocks, too. 46. ParallaxWeavers of EternityThe Parallax pattern looks similar to a DNA helix design and is created by intricately weaving two colours of paracord. While it looks simple at a glance, creating this can be fairly difficult to get right. View the entire tutorial here. 47. Thin LineParacord GuildAs a variation of the Cobra design, the Thin Line bracelet adds in a thin strand of colour, making it a popular design for police officers, EMTs, military personnel, and anyone with a specific colour-coded cause that they want to represent. View the entire tutorial here. 48. Cupid's BeltWeavers of EternityFrom afar, the Cupid's Belt looks like a simple red and white striped bracelet, but upon closer inspection, other paracord weavers are sure to appreciate the number of intricate weaves that go into making it up. View the entire tutorial here. 49. Mad MaxParacord GuildMade popular after being seen in the movie Mad Max: Fury Road, the Mad Max style is actually just a simple Cobra bracelet, but what makes it so unique is the closing design that also allows the bracelet to be tightened and loosened as needed. View the entire tutorial here. 50. Pulsar Bar Using two deeply contrasting colours, the Pulsar, or Binary, Bar is used to create a repeating pattern reminiscent of the binary code of ones and zeros. It is a way to rep your nerd pride without looking too bad while doing it. 51. CheckerboardBored ParacordWhat is more alluring than the classic checkerboard pattern? However, while pretty standard, it is a pretty time intensive weave to pull off. View the entire tutorial here. 52. SnakeParacord GuildUsing one or two colours fused together, the Snake design allows you to get a unique bracelet where it looks like the paracord is swallowed into each other in a round design similar to that of a snake. View the entire tutorial here. 53. Half Hitched / Double Tatted BarParacord Guild Using two colours, the Half Hitch / Double Tatted Bar looks actually like a series of cow hitch knots combined with the negative space found in other designs like the aforementioned Sonic Boom. However, while you can also clip things onto the loops of this bracelet, the loops are more compact and less likely to snag. View the entire tutorial here. 54. Tomahawk SinnetWeavers of Eternity Although thin, the Tomahawk Sinnet is fairly thick in girth with a pattern that features one colour essentially framing a zig-zag pattern in the center. View the entire tutorial here. Hard to Make Paracord Bracelets Intermediate-Hard 55. Pokemon GO This is one of those designs that is more awesome than it is useful. However, by using a series of Cobra weaves as well as a few other items to help with the shaping, you will create a bracelet that is the envy of other bracelets. It also shows that you want to be the very best, like no one ever was. 56. Star Wars Kyo Ren LightsaberWeavers of Eternity Following the wave of Star Wars mania, this bracelet allows you to embrace your dark side with a Kyo Ren style lightsaber design made out of a series of different coloured Cobra weaves. It is also narrated by Kyo Ren, so there's that. View the entire tutorial here. 57. Deadpool Solomon KnotWeavers of Eternity Like Star Wars and Pokemon Go, of course Deadpool needed some tribute. This bracelet uses a four strand weave of red and white with a little extra detail work using microcord to replicate the eyes. View the entire tutorial here. 58. Bane's CuffWeavers of Eternity Extra wide and using six strands of cord, this is the widest of the wide bracelets and is right to be called a cuff rather than a bracelet. Through some time-intensive weaving, you get a super thick bracelet with a unique pronounced ridge, but it still not as wide as Bane's cuff. View the entire tutorial here. 59. 6-Stranded French SinnetBored Paracord Using six strands of three colours (you can use more if your fuse), the French Sinnet can come off looking like a hot mess if you choose colours poorly or miss even one crucial step. View the entire tutorial here. 60. Sanctified Thick, wide, and labour-intensive - creating this design takes a lot of work, but is so worth it. The highlight of the bracelet is the chainmail style endless falls in the center, but with the addition of microcord accents, the design is given further interest to the eye. Unfortunately, because it is so intricate, it is also difficult to unravel. 61. Sanctified SwitchbackWeavers of EternityLike the above Sanctified design, this style switches out the chainmail in the center for a series of slightly easier switchbacks. View the entire tutorial here. 62. Lightning StrikeParacord GuildThis design uses the King Cobra weave combined with type one paracord in order to create a unique lightning strike pattern. While it looks easy, there is actually quite a bit of planning involved if you want it to come out right. View the entire tutorial here. 63. Gaucho FanParacord GuildUsing a dowel rod, the gaucho fan uses two long lengths of type one paracord to create a round bracelet with a design similar to the classic gaucho ponchos. View the entire tutorial here. 64. Hex NutWeavers of Eternity Hex Nut weaves are popular among paracord weavers that like a little bling on their bracelets (plus those hex nuts can be super useful). In this design, the hex nuts are arranged in a way that gives them a braided like appearance with Cobra weaves for comfort on the underside of your wrist. View the entire tutorial here. 65. Genoise Piano Bar This particular bracelet design takes the particularly showy Genoise pattern and changes it into piano keys by using black and white as the colours. However, at its heart, this is just a typical Genoise design so you can use any colours you'd like. 66. Wide GenoiseBored ParacordLike the Genoise design above? Well, how would you like it to be wider? View the entire tutorial here. 67. Tank TrucksBored ParacordThis design uses a modified version of two weaves into order to create something wholly unique that also happens to look like tank tracks rolling across your wrist. View the entire tutorial here. 68. Solomon V BarParacord 101This weave uses the Solomon weave (otherwise known as the Cobra) to create what looks like a simple V pattern. However, by using three different colours, it is tougher than it looks. View the entire tutorial here. 69. Chain Mail TrilobiteWeavers of EternityThis tutorial takes the moderately difficult trilobite weave and adds something really cool - chain links. By adding the metal links into the weaving, it gives your bracelet the unique look of hex nuts without the serious bulk of hex nuts. View the entire tutorial here. 70. Solomon's Heart This pattern is made from the simple Solomon (or Cobra) design, but it looks vastly different from the base design due to the addition of complex weaves to form a series of hearts. 71. Wauseon Totem BarBored ParacordSimilar to the much easier Sonic Boom design, the Wauseon Totem Bar weave features loops that are filled in with paracord to form something akin to fins or wings like you would see on its inspiration - a totem pole. View the entire tutorial here. 72. ConquistadorParacord Guild Wide like a cuff, the Conquistador bracelet is created using the same weaving design that conquistadors used on their belts to hold up their pants while pillaging ancient nations. Although relatively simple looking, this weave takes time and finesse to pull off. View the entire tutorial here. 73. Solomon's DragonParacord GuildThis style of bracelet has become popular due to the amount of ways you can customize it. While the Solomon weave is simple on its own, using three colours and well as doing the stitching correctly requires some finesse. View the entire tutorial here. 74. 3-Colour Mated SnakeParacord Guild The Mated Snake is a popular design for the way its two colours interlock, but when you add a third colour in there, you get a wonderfully wide creation that is perfect for your three favourite colours. Unfortunately, this design requires a fair bit of time as well as practice. View the entire tutorial here. So there you have it. 74 different Paracord bracelets tutorials to keep you busy for months.
